Empowered Women Eliminating Poverty

2013 ANNUAL REPORT

Making a Difference
With each passing year at Friendship Bridge, we are more humbled and proud of the many accomplishments this organization is able to achieve because of the support of our friends, donors and volunteers and the incredible hard work of our more than 104 committed employees.

This year was no exception. In 2013, our portfolio grew almost 27% over 2012, broadening our reach so we are now serving more than 20,000 women. However, impact cannot simply be measured in the number of clients we serve, but in how we serve them.

Unquestionably, our mission is making a difference in the lives of the women we serve. Our new social performance initiatives and evaluation work shows a clear, positive association between the length of time a client is in our program and a declining level of poverty. Friendship Bridge is helping to reduce the burden of poverty in two ways – by creating a more consistent cash flow so clients can better weather shocks such as unexpected illnesses or natural disasters and by helping clients learn through a variety of educational topics on how to improve their lives and their businesses. We also know that the first thing a client does with her improved income is buy more and better food for her family and then she sends her children to school. This past year we continued to make a difference by introducing a new Escolar (school) loan to pay for supplies to keep those children in school. This is just one of the three new credit products introduced this year in direct response to the needs of our clients. Other new initiatives, in addition to the Escolar Loan above, include a Clean Stove Loan and Parallel Loans for existing clients with specific needs beyond the group loan.

Friendship Bridge continues to receive recognition for its work with the Progress Out of Poverty Index® measurement tool (PPI®) and was recently highlighted in the Grameen Foundation’s blog. We were asked to present our Social Performance Management program in September at the Latin America Village Banking Forum. This program of measurement and evaluation remains a critical focus for us to ensure that we are meeting our clients’ needs AND maximizing our impact on their lives.

Our new strategic plan for 2014 – 2016 reflects a strong commitment to clients’ growth as individuals, entrepreneurs and change-makers within their communities. The next three years will see an emphasis upon continued development of the Client Continuum. Our strategy is to offer the most relevant programs to clients at whatever their level of development, whether a first-time client dreaming of a more stable future or an experienced leader in search of new opportunities and markets. As clients reach higher levels of economic and social empowerment, Friendship Bridge wants to grow with them and be a significant part of their journey at every step along the way.

In 2014, the plan also calls for expansion into two new geographic areas, Huehuetenango and San Marcos. All we have done and plan to do would not be possible without the continued support of our volunteers, donors, partners, investors and employees. It is only through you that we are able to fulfill our mission to serve these amazing and resourceful women and help them build a better future. Thank you again for all your help. Together we can empower women to eliminate poverty.

Mission
TO EMPOWER IMPOVERISHED GUATEMALAN WOMEN TO CREATE A BETTER FUTURE FOR THEMSELVES, THEIR CHILDREN AND THEIR COMMUNITIES THROUGH MICROFINANCE AND EDUCATION.

Vision
A WORLD IN WHICH EMPOWERED WOMEN ELIMINATE POVERTY.

Friends

IN 2013, OUR PORTFOLIO GREW ALMOST 27% OVER 2012, BROADENING OUR REACH SO WE ARE NOW SERVING MORE THAN 20,000 WOMEN.
In 2013, Friendship Bridge expanded from one basic loan product, adding three new loans in direct response to the feedback we received from our clients. The following loans and education programs were offered:

- Microcredit Plus Program - Group Loans or Trust Banks and basic non-formal education curriculum. Friendship Bridge’s Microcredit Plus program is not a short-term fix but helps to build a foundation for lasting social and economic change.

Through microfinance and education, we empower impoverished Guatemalan women to create better futures for themselves, their children and their communities. Small businesses, such as weaving and other types of artisan products, food preparation such as tortillas or pastries, small scale farming, raising livestock and operating tiny convenience stores, benefit from microfinance as only a small loan is necessary to make the work much more efficient and productive and to ensure a consistent cash flow for the family. Additionally, education is an essential part of every Friendship Bridge loan and is one of the critical factors that differentiate us from other microfinance institutions. Education is fundamental to helping clients gain empowerment and achieve financial stability. Education is an important component of the program and clients are required, as part of the loan agreement, to participate in non-formal education curriculum which is delivered in their native language. Friendship Bridge’s Microcredit Plus program is not a short-term fix but helps to build a foundation for lasting social and economic change.

To supplement Microcredit Plus, more experienced clients are offered training through the Advanced Education Program. This program offers technical and advanced business training to help clients acquire a new skill, giving them an immediate opportunity to generate and/or diversify their income. During the training, clients learn how to produce new, high quality products or enhance their skills which they can implement immediately in their businesses. The training also includes critical business and financial skills and how to market their products. Many clients who live in remote, rural areas would not otherwise have an opportunity to learn these specialized skills. Courses include, among others, pastry making, canning and preserving, candle making, sausage making, floristry, and soap/making workshops. Friendship Bridge covers the cost of the training and arranges all logistics and transportation to the facility.

Inaugurated in 2012, the Advanced Education Program grew exponentially in 2013. Up 66% from the prior year, 517 clients participated in various types of technical training and a total of over 800 clients have participated since 2012. To help in this effort, Friendship Bridge coordinates with three partners: FUNDAP, Las Gravileas, and Intecap.

Friendship Bridge has always been committed to making a transformative social impact in the lives of Guatemalan women, their families, and their communities. In 2011, Friendship Bridge took this commitment one step further by investing in resources for Social Performance Management (SPM), designating staff and systems specifically to monitor performance and measure its social impact. Within two years, Friendship Bridge has emerged as a leader in this growing movement.

SPM is an institutionalized process which involves setting clear social objectives (e.g. improved poverty levels of clients), monitoring and assessing progress towards achieving these goals, and using this information to improve overall organizational performance.

As its guiding framework, Friendship Bridge utilizes the Universal Standards for Social Performance Management which were developed by industry leaders. These include:

1. Defining and monitoring social goals
2. Ensuring board, management and employee commitments to social goals
3. Treating our clients responsibly
4. Designing programs, services, delivery methods that meet clients’ needs and preferences
5. Treating employees responsibly
6. Balancing financial and social performance

ANNUAL STAFF SATISFACTION SURVEY TO DIRECT CHANGES IN ORGANIZATIONAL CULTURE AND POLICIES: SATISFACTION LEVELS IMPROVED FOR 3 YEARS IN A ROW

THE YEAR 2013 MARKED THE FIRST FULL YEAR OF IMPLEMENTING A SOCIAL PERFORMANCE DEPARTMENT AT FRIENDSHIP BRIDGE. AS A RESULT, THE ORGANIZATION WAS ABLE TO COLLECT VALUABLE DATA RELATED TO CLIENT OUTCOMES AND REGULARLY MONITOR ITS ADVANCEMENT TOWARD SOCIAL GOALS. THOSE INSIGHTS ALSO HELPED FRIENDSHIP BRIDGE STAFF UNDERSTAND HOW TO IMPROVE ITS PROGRAMS AND SERVICES, GUIDING DECISION-MAKING IN PROGRAM DEVELOPMENT.

SOME OF THE THINGS WE LEARNED:

Loan officers play an integral role in program delivery and client satisfaction. This led to increased training and supervision for loan officers, as well as a re-characterization of the role as “Relationship Managers.”

After sampling clients over a one and a half year period, Friendship Bridge was able to see which poverty levels it most effectively served, and narrowed its target market accordingly while also having the information to develop more appropriate programs and services.

Since clients prioritized health as an essential step toward stability, Friendship Bridge initiated a health services program, beginning with a loan program for clean-burning stoves and an initiative for a much larger, longer-term program to address preventative health challenges and education.

Evaluation data revealed that artisan and agricultural clients were more likely to be poorer, which led to the development of comprehensive initiatives specific to clients in these areas.
TO BETTER UNDERSTAND THE NEEDS OF OUR CLIENTS, FRIENDSHIP BRIDGE DIVIDES THEM INTO THREE SEGMENTS CORRESPONDING WITH THEIR UNIQUE STAGES OF DEVELOPMENT. WE CAN THEN TAILOR PRODUCTS AND SERVICES TO ASSIST CLIENTS IN DEVELOPING THE SOCIAL AND FINANCIAL SKILLS NEEDED AT EACH LEVEL OF THE CLIENT CONTINUUM.

DREAMER
The earliest stage of development. Dreamers are often new to the Friendship Bridge program. Most of them are just beginning to experience increased confidence and family decision-making. Their priorities are usually beginning to shift from basic survival to education for the children and healthier standards of living. Not surprisingly, one of the first things they do with their earnings is provide better nutrition for their families and put their children in school.

ENTREPRENEUR
The middle stage of development. Entrepreneurs are often women who are beginning to experience higher levels of social and economic empowerment and are creating a vision for what they want. They tend to invest their earnings into home improvements and are beginning to save so they can better weather economic and health related shocks. As entrepreneurs, they are growing their businesses, engaging the community, and may even have the ability to hire others.

LEADER
The most advanced stage of development. Leaders are women who are not only experiencing empowerment, but are using it to inspire institutional change in their communities. These women have the business skills to innovate and run larger businesses, and may be searching for expanded markets. They dream big and believe that with the right training and financial products, they can achieve their goals.
Without perseverance and a positive attitude, it is unlikely that María Tun Panjoj would be where she is today. In 2010, Tropical Storm Agatha hit María’s home in Aldea Xajaxac, Sololá, a small village in southwest Guatemala. The unrelenting storm washed away everything she and her family had, including their home and crops. In the aftermath of the storm, María used her Friendship Bridge loans to rebuild her life again.

“Without perseverance and a positive attitude, it is unlikely that María Tun Panjoj would be where she is today.”

Like many girls in Guatemala, María learned to weave when she was very young. After she met and married her husband Tomas, a farmer, she devoted much of her time to helping with their farm while also maintaining a weaving business on the side. Now 29 years old with five children, María works hard every day to grow several different kinds of vegetables, mostly potatoes and carrots. They work the land themselves until harvest season when they hire others, mostly women, to help. They use their loans to buy seeds, fertilizer, and hire workers. Through access to microloans, María has rebuilt her home and managed to keep her children in school. She and her husband dream of acquiring more land to expand their farm.

“My childhood was difficult because girls had very little opportunity. We were taught to be housewives and tend to the home and children. I now believe things are changing and girls can be treated as equals, with the same opportunities to attend school and start businesses. I hope to send my girls to school by the time they are ready, as I did my three boys. I will work hard to keep them in school, regardless of the ups and downs of our income from farming,” María says. Friendship Bridge offers María loans despite the risks in farming. For María’s part, she has used her loans to support the farm and repay them each year. For a little extra income, María continues to weave huipils when she has the time.

“It takes more than tools and money to escape poverty. To be truly empowered, one’s attitude is essential.”

Juana Son Cojti is a woman driven to beat the odds. At 43, she lives in Tecpan, Chimaltenango in the Central Highlands of Guatemala with her 12 children ranging in age from 1 to 24 years old. With no formal education, Juana owns a sweater factory which she has turned into a successful business. She drew her first loan with Friendship Bridge four years ago, and attributes much of her success to the education and capital she received through the program. Her journey to empowerment embodies the essential rewards of learning, hard work and a desire to succeed.

“I had the desire to go to school. I watched the students in my community filled with excitement about school, but for my parents, school was not important. This was even truer because I was a woman. It was my place to learn how to tend to the home so by the time I was married with my own family, I would be ready to be a good wife,” she says. Juana was married at age 16 and began a family with her husband Mardoqueo.

“Without perseverance and a positive attitude, it is unlikely that María Tun Panjoj would be where she is today.”

Until four years ago, Juana was a housewife and her husband a tailor in a clothing factory. That was when her husband was laid off because the owner could no longer afford to pay him. Juana decided to turn that hardship into an opportunity. She sold many of their belongings and purchased factory equipment to make sweaters out of their home.

They quickly increased their customer base and were looking to buy more equipment. That’s when they discovered Friendship Bridge. Juana was nervous to borrow a loan at first, but now feels it was the best decision she ever made. Her family now has six machines, employs five people from their community, and has expanded from one line of sweaters for women to two. They have even added a line for men.

Of Juana’s 12 children, seven are currently in school, three have graduated and two are not yet of school age. Her husband, Mardoqueo says “I want to thank Friendship Bridge and its supporters for providing us microloans, which have benefited my entire family.” Juana’s determination, vision, and willingness to take risks have paid off for her, her family, and her community. She has grown so that her business has grown: She is inspiring to all of us.
One of 11 children, Cecilia Pacajoj Cipriano learned the reality of poverty at an early age. Remarkably, she was able to complete the 4th grade, but was eventually forced to quit school and help her mother sell textiles at the market in Panajachel, Quiché. She never married, and at 39 she lives at home with her elderly parents and grandmother all of whom she supports.

In time, Cecilia took over her mother’s textile business and created a more formal enterprise of reselling textiles. She decided to rent her own booth at the Panajachel market and worked hard to make enough to pay rent for the space. Soon doing so, her business grew exponentially. Besides the booth in Panajachel which she attends four days a week, another booth was added at the market in nearby Chichicastenango which she attends another two days of the week.

Despite some success, Cecilia realized that if her business were to grow any further, she would need another source of investment. Seven years ago, she joined a Friendship Bridge Trust Bank in Chichicastenango to remedy the problem. The loans she received from Friendship Bridge allowed her to maintain the levels of inventory needed for continued growth. Today she employs seven people from Chichicastenango to weave additional textiles for sale in both booths. She supplies the raw materials her employees need for production.

Besides textiles, she hopes to also sell beaded jewelry and ornaments one day soon. She participated in Friendship Bridge’s Advanced Training Program to learn this new skill and is currently perfecting the technique.

Finally, Cecilia is devoting time to developing herself as well as her business. She has enrolled in school and currently attends middle school. In addition, she is taking two classes outside of school: English as a second language so she can more easily negotiate with her foreign customers, and a computer class to make managing her accounting easier. Eventually she plans to go to college. “When I was younger, I did not see any benefit from education and thought it was a waste of time. I realize now that it is necessary for the proper management of a business. After hearing so many times during training with Friendship Bridge, I finally feel value and could enroll myself in school,” says Cecilia.

Friendship Circles

Circles are groups of dedicated volunteers who provide their time, talents and resources to support the mission of Friendship Bridge. We are extremely fortunate to have 12 circles of volunteers throughout the country who, through a variety of fundraising activities, contributed a total of $212,000 to our programs in Guatemala.

FRIENDSHIP BRIDGE CIRCLES

1. California (Antelope Valley, Central Coast, Chico)
2. Colorado (Evergreen, Foothills, Genesee and Salida)
3. New Mexico (Santa Fe)
4. North Carolina (Wilmington)
5. Texas (San Antonio)
6. Wisconsin (Mequon and Oconomowoc)

Each circle uses its own unique approach to raising funds and awareness for Friendship Bridge, from selling hand-crafted “swittens” (wool mittens made from old sweaters) to special events like the Persian rug sale event held in Genesee and Denver, the annual “Day of the Dead” celebration in Antelope Valley to speaking on our behalf at local rotary clubs. Circles also play an instrumental role in our annual Building Bridges event by donating auction items, time and food and serving on our volunteer committees.

Through their own bond of friendship, circle members create a bridge of kindness and support to our clients. Circle members often travel to Guatemala on Insight Trips to firsthand the challenges our clients meet every day and the incredible resourcefulness and resilience of these amazing women.

Special thanks to Constancia Leshin for all her help with translations and editing – truly service above and beyond!

“By fundraising to provide opportunities for Friendship Bridge clients, our Circle members feel a genuine kinship with our sisters in Guatemala.”
