2006 was a remarkable year for microfinance. In October, Muhammad Yunus and the Grameen Bank were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. In November, the Global Microcredit Summit, which was attended by more than 2,000 delegates from over 110 countries, including Friendship Bridge, was held in Halifax, Nova Scotia. One of the goals set at this Summit aims to provide microcredit and other financial services to 175 million of the world’s poorest people, especially women, by 2015. Both of these events have focused international attention on microcredit and its tremendous potential to empower women, children, and families throughout the world.

Friendship Bridge, like other microcredit organizations, offers families the opportunity to increase their income by providing microcredit to entrepreneurial women, many of whom are living in marginalized communities and exist on less than $1 per day. These loans, along with non-formal education in business and health, allow women and their families to gain their independence and break the cycle of poverty.

Friendship Bridge is working to support the goals of the Global Microcredit Summit within the framework of our own goals by increasing the number of our borrowers to at least 35,000 by 2011.

We made significant progress toward these goals in 2006:
- We provided small business loans and education to 8,200 women.
- Our loan portfolio grew by 67 percent to $1.6 million with loans ranging from $40 to $800.
- We funded education scholarships for over 9,000 of our clients’ children.
- We received our first endowment gift designated for the Children’s Education Program.
- We hired Marco Mollinedo, who has 12 years of microfinance experience in Latin America, as our in-country Director in Guatemala.
- We formed a Board of Advisors to assist with strategic issues.

In 2007, we will double our outreach to 16,000 clients and increase our loan portfolio to $3.39 million. Accompanying this growth is Friendship Bridge’s commitment to the values that guide our programs – empowerment, initiative, and education – one woman and family at a time.

Participants in our programs continue to experience new successes as entrepreneurs, parents, and leaders in their communities.

Friendship Bridge is expanding educational opportunities for many of our clients and their children by providing scholarships, essential school supplies, and establishing Learning Centers in borrowers’ communities.

Our efforts to integrate microcredit and education are making a difference in rural Guatemala, and it is your continuing support that is making this possible.

Yours truly,

Helen M. Gair

Mission Statement:
Friendship Bridge provides microcredit and education to help women and their families create their own solutions to poverty.

We Believe That:
The development of microenterprise is critical in the fight against poverty. Microcredit provides opportunities for women, so they can make changes in their own lives.
Women are leaders and agents of change in their families and their communities. Non-formal, participatory education incorporates the lived experience of clients while building new skills.
Formal education for children breaks the cycle of poverty and allows children to become leaders and active participants in their communities.
Health education enhances personal, family, and community well being.
We respect the spiritual roots and culture of the communities in which we work.
We believe in the participatory process to incorporate the voice of everyone in the organization, especially clients.

Doña Clara Torres Lucas

“Step by step, little by little, struggle by struggle, my life has improved with Friendship Bridge.” Since her first $100 loan, she and her husband have improved their basket making business, built a larger, sturdier house, and many of her daughters have become Friendship Bridge clients.
Poverty in rural Guatemala is pervasive and persistent. Limited or inadequately paying jobs, lack of basic health care, education, and access to financial services means families live without basic necessities. Language barriers, discrimination, natural disasters, and the lingering effects of a 36-year civil war that ended ten years ago are particularly disastrous for rural Mayans – especially women.

Friendship Bridge offers microcredit and educational programs designed to empower women in rural Guatemala with the ability to increase their income generating potential. Our new In-Country Director, Marco Mollinedo, arrived in July 2006, with a great deal of experience in microfinance and his own hopes for the future of Friendship Bridge. He has inspired a variety of changes that will allow the Microcredit Plus Program to grow effectively and efficiently.

The staff in Guatemala is working to formalize enhancements that will strengthen both the women and the programs, such as:

- Loan groups are managing more aspects of their own meetings. Clients are collecting repayments and taking them to the bank. This strategy increases loan officer productivity while improving clients’ confidence and self-esteem.
- Clients are choosing which education topics are important to them and will share in the responsibility of finding locally available resources to bring the information into their groups. They enjoy being involved in selecting the material to be covered, and are encouraged to share their own knowledge and expertise.
- A variety of loan products that meet the needs of rural women from different areas of rural Guatemala are being designed.

In 2006, the loan portfolio grew by 67 percent to $1.6 million – in loans ranging from $40-$800 – with a repayment rate of 98%. By the end of 2007, Friendship Bridge will once again double in size and have more than 16,000 women in the Microcredit Plus Program with a loan portfolio of nearly $3.4 million. Our ability to grow means some of the poorest women in Guatemala can achieve success in business and provide opportunities for their families that were once a distant dream.

Before Natalia took her first loan from Friendship Bridge, this struggling widow was borrowing money from a local moneylender to buy food, at rates as high as 100%. Now she is able to afford a much better diet for her family using the profits from her weaving business.

Strategic Goals for Friendship Bridge’s Microcredit Plus and Children’s Education Programs:

- Working with 35,000 women in rural Guatemala, offering microcredit and non-formal education, by 2011.
- Reaching the poorest women in rural Guatemala.
- Ensuring effective financial and social performance for Friendship Bridge and our clients.
- Being operationally sustainable.
- All of our clients’ children are in school and passing from grade to grade.

What Women Do With Their Loans

- 28.67% Food Sales and Household Items
- 21.65% Agriculture and Animal Husbandry
- 2.76% Miscellaneous Sales
- 46.92% Clothing and Handicrafts

Interviews with clients in 2006 revealed that Friendship Bridge programs are reaching our target population and they:

- Live on $1 – $2 per day (the international poverty measure for poor and extreme poor).
- Have an average level of schooling of 2.4 years.
- Have an average household size of six – indicating a high level of vulnerability.
Guatemala has the lowest per capita spending for education in all of Latin America. Children seeking an education in rural Guatemala, particularly indigenous children, face many challenges. Friendship Bridge believes that education is critical to breaking the cycle of poverty.

In 2006, more than 9,000 children of Friendship Bridge clients received support for their education in the form of scholarships, school supplies, and access to study centers. An impressive 87 percent of these students passed for the year.

For many students, providing scholarships for educational expenses is not enough to ensure their success. Friendship Bridge is implementing new strategies to support children’s education in 2007.

We are providing:

- School supplies for 6,200 children of some of our newest clients, particularly girls.
- Scholarships for a distance learning program students can work through from home – aimed at older students who wish to complete primary school.
- Learning Centers, where students receive help with their homework and can take classes in typing and computers. Hundreds of children are accessing this exciting new resource in Nebaj each month.

Creating opportunities for women in rural Guatemala to increase their income means more of their children can attend school. During the school year, women discuss challenges and strategies to help their students succeed, such as nutrition, study skills, and how to handle issues with teachers. This is particularly beneficial to the large number of women who were not able to attend school themselves.

Nicolas Sicay Mesia, a former Friendship Bridge scholarship student, now earns his own money to attend high school. Friendship Bridge has given scholarships to over 27,000 students since the program began seven years ago. Seventy-seven percent of students in the Friendship Bridge sponsored junior high school pilot program went on to high school. The average secondary school enrollment across Guatemala is only 33.5 percent of the age group.
Get Involved

Insight Trips
Each year Friendship Bridge organizes Insight Trips - opportunities for volunteers and donors to visit the programs and witness firsthand how microcredit plus is changing lives in rural Guatemala. In 2006, fifty-six volunteers, donors, and Circle members took advantage of this opportunity to bridge people and cultures together, meeting with clients and staff in towns and villages where Friendship Bridge works.

Friendship Bridge
Circles and Volunteers

Circles consist of volunteer fundraisers and advocates for Friendship Bridge in their communities across the U.S. and in Guatemala and Japan. Each of the now 20 Circles sponsors at least one loan group through their own fundraising activities. These creative, energetic groups raised 13 percent of the total revenue generated in 2006.

Friendship Bridge is fortunate to have over 400 volunteers across the U.S. and beyond who generously donate their valuable time (a total of 16,065 hours in 2006!) assisting staff with fundraising, public speaking, research, writing, graphic design, and computer consulting. They help coordinate events, stuff envelopes, and create items to sell. Volunteer nurse educators teach, write papers, and collaborate with their colleagues in Vietnam.

The total value of services provided by volunteers in 2006 was over $295,000. We are grateful for their time and commitment. It means we can do more to alleviate poverty in rural Guatemala and to promote nursing education and urology research and practice in Vietnam.
Magdalena Ajtujal Xicay used to live in a cane house and her children suffered in the cold. Income from her beadwork business helped her build a warmer, sturdier cement house.

Josefa Damián Ajuchán, a 37-year-old widow from Tzanchaj, has eight children. Her husband was killed when the youngest child was just a month old. Her sisters, Friendship Bridge clients themselves, encouraged her to take advantage of the opportunity to receive credit, and now she and the older children have a beadwork business.

Juana Cobo Pérez has a handicraft business. In 1980, the Guatemalan army moved into Nebaj, terrorizing the community with violence and intimidation. Juana lived in fear of being killed, until she and her family fled to Guatemala City. When they returned in 1996, their home had been burned and everything was lost. Today, Juana sees a bright future for herself and her family. She enjoys the freedom to weave and travels to different communities selling her huipiles.

There is no word for success in many Mayan languages, so clients are asked, “What are your dreams?”

“Money to educate all my children, so they don’t have to work as hard as we do.”
“Better food for my family.”
“To have my own market stall.”
“Be able to export my weaving.”
“Larger loans. Larger profits.”

For them, success is measured in their children, their family, and then their business. For them, growing their business is tied to the needs of their family. Their dreams are for their children, and they work hard every day to provide a better future for them.

Poverty in Guatemala is a vast problem with no easy solution, but with microcredit and education, women are attaining their dreams.

Vietnam Programs

Friendship Bridge began as a medical relief program in Vietnam in 1989. Today, Friendship Bridge volunteers still allocate time and resources to these projects.

The Friendship Bridge Nurses Group

Thanks to the efforts of the Friendship Bridge Nurses Group, a Masters in Nursing Program was approved in 2006 by the Vietnamese Ministries of Health and Education and the University of Medicine and Pharmacy in Ho Chi Minh City. The first class of 20 candidates will begin their program in September 2007.

Over the past 16 years, The Friendship Bridge Nurses Group has changed the face of nursing in Vietnam. Dedicated volunteers and nurse educators, Kathy Whitney, Sara Jarrett, and Faye Hummel, have pushed the training and education level of Vietnamese nurses ahead by 50 years, benefiting millions.

Urology Project

Improving the level of urologic care in Vietnam continues to be a passion of Friendship Bridge Co-Founder and retired urologist, Dr. Ted Ning. In cooperation with International Volunteers in Urology (IVU), U.S. doctors and surgical residents travel to Vietnam at their own expense to participate in research, observe surgical techniques and interact with an international community of doctors and other health care professionals.
